Lombardia

This wine region has a long but often overshadowed history with Nebbiolo. In Lombardia, Nebbiolo—locally known as Chiavennasca—thrives in the alpine terroir of Valtellina. Here, steep, terraced vineyards produce elegant, mineral-driven expressions of the grape. Though less powerful than its Barolo or Barbaresco counterparts, these wines are still prized for their age-worthiness, and distinct mountain character.

Friuli-Venezia Giulia

Tucked between the Adriatic Sea and the soaring Alps, Friuli Venezia Giulia stands apart as one of Italy's most distinctive and dynamic wine regions.

This northeastern frontier is a cultural and climatic crossroads — and it shows in the glass. From the crisp, saline minerality of Friulano to the intensely aromatic Pinot Grigio and the textural intrigue of Ribolla Gialla, the whites here are anything but conventional. The reds, too, surprise with their finesse, structure, and quiet power. This is not just Italian wine — it's Friulian, and that makes all the difference.

Nebbiolo: Italy's Noble Grape

Nebbiolo is the ethereal, pale-hued powerhouse of Piedmont—high in tannin, lifted by bright acidity, and perfumed with roses, cherry, tar, and truffle. Few grapes communicate their origin with such purity, which is why its finest expressions shine across four iconic appellations: Gattinara, Langhe, Barbaresco, and Barolo.

Gattinara emerges from the cool, alpine-influenced hills of Alto Piemonte, where volcanic soils and mountain breezes shape Nebbiolo into a taut, mineral-driven wine. Expect aromas of rose, sour cherry, smoke, and iron, wrapped in bright acidity and fine yet firm tannins. Gattinara offers a noble, precise, age-worthy expression—elegant, lifted, and uniquely northern.

Langhe Nebbiolo serves as the most approachable gateway to the grape. Crafted from younger vines or parcels outside the top crus, these wines emphasize freshness and purity: vibrant red fruit, floral notes, and supple tannins. It's Nebbiolo's charm without the wait, delivering authenticity in a more easygoing frame.

Barbaresco strikes a beautiful balance of refinement and approachability. Slightly warmer conditions and shorter aging requirements produce wines that are aromatic, silky, and often ready to enjoy earlier than their Barolo counterparts. Look for violets, cherry, sweet spice, and polished tannins that glide across the palate with grace.

Barolo, finally, shows Nebbiolo at its most powerful and long-lived. Its patchwork of soils and traditional long aging forge wines with formidable structure and profound depth—firm tannins, layers of cherry, rose, licorice, and earth—and the capacity to evolve for decades. Barolo is the monument of the region, the standard by which Nebbiolo's greatness is often measured.

Nebbiolo is revered as the best of the best in Italian wine because no other Italian grape offers such harmony of perfume, transparency, structure, and longevity. From the volcanic precision of Gattinara to the grandeur of Barolo, Nebbiolo doesn't merely express terroir—it transforms it into art.

GATTINARA NEBBIOLO

Gattinara, from northern Piedmont's Vercelli province, grows on volcanic soils and produces wines of firm structure, bright acidity, and minerality. These wines often show floral, earth, and iron notes, and they age exceptionally well.

LANGHE NEBBIOLO

In contrast, Langhe Nebbiolo—sourced from the broader Langhe area, often from younger vines or declassified Barolo and Barbaresco parcels—tends to be more approachable in youth. It features softer tannins, ripe red fruit, and a more immediate, accessible expression of Nebbiolo.

BARBARESCO

Barbaresco and Barolo are two of Italy's most iconic wines, both crafted from the Nebbiolo grape in the Piedmont region, yet they express distinct personalities due to differences in terroir, climate, and aging requirements.

Barbaresco, benefits from a milder climate and maritime influence, which allows the grapes to ripen earlier. The result is a wine that's more approachable in its youth—softer, more delicate, and aromatic—with a minimum aging requirement of 24 months (9 in oak).

Barolo comes from a higher elevation area with a slightly cooler climate, resulting in wines that are more powerful, structured, and tannic. It's often described as bold and brooding, with a traditional minimum aging requirement of 38 months (18 in oak), and many producers age it longer.

While both exhibit classic Nebbiolo notes—rose, cherry, earth, and truffle—Barolo leans toward a more muscular, age-worthy expression, while Barbaresco tends to be more refined, elegant, and accessible earlier. Think of Barolo as the stately king and Barbaresco as the graceful queen of Piedmont.

VICINO A CASA, SONO AMICI / E LE COSE CHE CI PIACCIAMO

Welcome to “Close to Home, Friends & Things We Like.”

While Italy remains a beacon of exceptional winemaking, we've ventured beyond its borders to present you with a handpicked array of wines from regions that resonate with us.

FRANCE

While the rivalry between France and Italy may be legendary, in reality, their wine cultures have long been in quiet conversation — especially here in the Veneto. Italians, with their discerning palates and deep respect for craft, have long embraced France's greatest expressions: the precision of Champagne, the texture and mineral drive of Burgundy's whites, and the soulful structure of reds from Bordeaux to the Rhône.

It's no surprise that Italy ranks among the world's top consumers of French wine. In a region like the Veneto — where elegance and restraint define the cuisine — these wines offer not contrast, but harmony. Champagne cuts through the richness of seafood and pasta with lift and finesse. Chardonnay from Chablis or Meursault echoes the saline notes of fish dishes. Reds lend structure, depth, and elegance to hearty Northern Italian dishes without overwhelming them.

GERMANY

Germany lies just beyond the Alps from Italy's Veneto region, making it a natural neighbor with deep culinary and cultural ties. That closeness is why we've included a touch of Germany on our menu—an homage to shared borders, blended traditions, and the flavors that travel easily across mountain passes.

AUSTRIA

Just beyond the crest of the Alps, Austria offers a thrilling counterpoint to Italy. Its wines, from the racy vibrancy of Grüner Veltliner to the crystalline purity of Riesling, reflect a terroir shaped by alpine breezes, steep hillsides, and ancient soils. Though stylistically distinct, Austria shares a deep-rooted viticultural dialogue with its neighbors to the south — especially Venice, with whom it once shared an empire and a trade route. Austrian wines feel less like imports and more like echoes from just over the mountains.

JAPAN

Our journey with sake runs deep — shaped in no small part by Stuart Morris, Master of Sake and former sake director at MINA Group. Many of us, including Carlo Splendorini, had the privilege of working alongside Stuart, and it was under his guidance that our appreciation evolved from curiosity to craft.

Japanese sake, with its purity, umami depth, and remarkable versatility, finds a natural and elegant place alongside Italian cuisine. From delicate crudos to rich pastas and aged cheeses, sake reveals new textures and harmonies that wine alone sometimes cannot. With Hachidori, we invite you to explore a conversation between Italy and Japan — one rooted in respect, refined through experience, and poured with purpose. Ask us for by the glass Hachidori!

CLOSE TO HOME

The United States, particularly California, is home to some of the world's finest wines, thanks to its diverse climates, rich soil, and innovative winemaking. From bold Napa Valley Cabernets to elegant Sonoma Chardonnays, American wines consistently earn global acclaim. We proudly feature select U.S. wines on our list—not only to celebrate local excellence, but also because their quality and character beautifully complement the flavors of Italian cuisine.

VINTAGE AMARI

Limited Quantities

We proudly offer a rare and subliminal experience: vintage amari.

These aged herbal liqueurs undergo a quiet transformation over time, where once-bold botanicals mellow and intertwine.

Through years of rest, their complex molecules create a unique symbiosis—bitterness softens, sweetness deepens, and new layers emerge. The result is not just a drink, but a living memory in a glass—one that speaks to patience, alchemy, and timeless Italian elegance. Let us pour you something unforgettable.

RARO ED EMOZIONANTE

Our curated collection of rare and emotionally resonant spirits—bottles chosen not just for their quality, but for the stories they carry. These pours are reflective, evocative, sometimes even haunting—crafted in small quantities, often never to be made again. Whether it's a forgotten distillery, a singular vintage, or a spirit born from tradition and struggle, each one offers a profound, personal encounter. It's a chance to taste something that lingers far beyond the glass.
